

At this year's Shared Knowledge Conference, held in Hodgkin Hall on November 8th, Erin Watson-Chappell placed third in the LoboBITES Competition. Ms. Watson-Chappell is a doctoral student working with Dr. Coen Adema in the Department of Biology.

Ms. Watson-Chappell presented a talk entitled, "Exploring Snail Immunology Using the Common Garden Snail." You can see her presentation, as well as the presentations of the other participants, at <https://grad.unm.edu/skc/lobobites.html>.

LoboBITES are three-minute talks based on a thesis, dissertation or other substantial research that are appropriate for a general, non-academic audience.

The Shared Knowledge Conference is a yearly celebration of UNM graduate students and their outstanding research and scholarship. The Conference is sponsored by Graduate Studies, the Vice President for Research, and UNM Alumni Affairs.

Left to right: Erin Watson-Chappell, Cristabelle de Souza & James Fluke